Sept. 24, 2018 - Following their success at the Luminato Festival in Toronto in June 2018, Tim Brady's Instruments of Happiness mass guitar group returns for a special concert on February 24, 2019 at Saint-Joseph's Oratory, during the Festival Montréal/Nouvelles Musiques. The group could total as many as 150 electric guitars.

As with all Instruments of Happiness productions, we are holding our MEET-UP DAY and OPEN AUDITIONS for any guitarist who wants to play in this unique, creative project. We are interested in all levels of players, although it is important that they can play basic barre chords and very basic scales.

Knowledge of music notation is useful, but NOT essential. All community players will be coached by professional guitarists, who will make sure the experience is enjoyable for everyone, regardless of playing ability.

AUDITIONS are simple, take 5 minutes, and are designed to welcome everyone into the process. We really only want to tell you about the project and see how your talent can fit in this innovative project. Nothing to be afraid about – we really want you to play with us! Just bring your guitar and a sense of adventure.

“We really want to have the amazing musical experience with you. Don't be afraid – just bring your guitar and your sense of adventure!” – Tim Brady
